FASHION'S FANCIES.

Something to Interest the Fair Sex.

Ellegant velvet dinner dresses are trimmed with Venetian point-lace.

Featherfans, with peal sticks are among the popular holiday goods.

Ottoman ribbons of all widths are most in favor for millinery purposes.

Dresses that are trimmed with velvet have belts of velvet with silver clasps.

Wide collars of plush that are edged with lace, or plaited ribbon, are worn by little girls.

Pompons of silk are more popular than they have ever been, and are used on hats, mantles and dresses.

Large buckles of gilt silver, jet, enamel and bronze are placed diagonally on the new bonnets.

House slippers for ladies and gentlemen are made of alligator skin dyed any color to suit the taste of the wearer.

Dresses shoes worn by small girls have the tops to match the color of the dress. The silk stockings also correspond in color with the dress material.

Black-satin buttoned boots, with jet buttons, are worn with dinner and reception dresses. Handsome slippers for the house are of black satin with square jet buckles that are worn with black-silk stockings.

The newest buttons for dress-trimming are jet, silver, bronze and wood carved in odd designs, some of them representing animals' heads, such as monkeys, lions and tigers; others are the carved heads of gods and goddesses.

The soft and pliable India silks, with brocaded flowers of different colors, are stylishly used in combination with plush velvets for elegant evening toilets. Handsome dresses are made of Ottoman silks, with figured velvets, brocaded stains and plain velvets of pale tints, such as pink, pale blue, amber, rose color and green.

A superb evening dress worn at a reception was of pale pink Ottoman silk made with a short skirt with two narrow knife-plaitings around the edge of the skirt, and a plain Jersey basque of the silk. The overskirt was of pink China crape, the graceful drapery being held by small birds of bright plumage.

Plain velvet costumes of dark dull colors are richly trimmed with fur; the furs most in favor for these suits are otter, beaver, hare and seal. The bonnets and muffs that accompany them are also finished off with the same kind of fur used as the trimming of the dress.

The Jersey ulster, so much in favor with young ladies, follows every outline of the figure which it makes to the greatest apparent length and least breadth. Tailors warn ladies that these garments are meant merely for walking, and that they must not sit down while wearing them. Striped black and white silk, and gay plush linings are in the hoods of such ulsters.

Jay Gould's Burial Plot.

Mount Vernon Chronicle.

Jay Gould has purchased, a plot in Woodlawn Cemetery for $40,000. For ten years past Mr. Gould has owned a plot in the cemetery. It is in the Chapel Hill lot on Chape Hill avenue, near the north-eastern entrance. It is immediately above the receiving tomb, and for this reason Mr. Gould determined to give it up. There never have been any burials in it. He selected another plot in the new western portion of the cemetery, immediately adjacent to the plot owned by Washington E. Connor. It is the finest site in the cemetery and is situated in the Lake View plot, about the middle of the cemetery grounds, including such of the grounds as are not laid out. It takes in about an acre of ground and covers an entire hill. It overlooks all the cemetery, and a walk winds around it. The price to be paid is near $40,000. It is said that Mr. Gould has not formed any plans for buildings to be put upon it.

Dresden's Sea Serpent.

Bath (Me.) Times.

The people of Dresden, Maine, were greatly excited the other day by the appearance of a sea serpent in their waters. The monster was discovered by two fishermen who were down the river in a boat, and as it was headed up the river they took a short cut and reached Dresden in advance. The towns-people were quickly notified of the terrible visitor, and a crowd speedily assembled on the river banks, armed with all sorts of weapons. The creature's movements seemed quite rapid, and the excitement was intense. "Don't you see him run his tongue out," hysterically exclaimed the female in one breath. "See him roll his eyes and wink," and down would go his head, his body would almost disappear, only to reappear at a short distance. A volley of shots greeted the intruder, and everybody "saw him kick," but no one dared investigate. Finally a couple of a men, more daring than the rest, made chase in a boat, and overtaking him, discovered that another wooden serpent had astonished the natives. The whole population had seen in a rolling, half sunken log the glaring eyes and rolling tongue of a marine leviathan, and had expended a great amount of ammunition in trying to kill him.

The Queen and John Brown.

London Letter.

The obstinacy of the Queen is proved by the open persistent favoritism shown to this same John Brown. Incomprehensible and meaningless, it goads almost to madness her immediate entourage, and every open or tacit opposition only causes it to be more manifest. That proudest of proud women has been made, by a preconcerted plan, to see this servant of hers in the most degrading state of drunkenness, almost at her very feet, and yet, with an infatuation stronger even than femininity, her manner to him remained unchanged, and she made no sign that could give a clue to her secret thoughts. Ladies in waiting of exalted rank have rebelled openly against the breach of etiquette his familiarity has created, and refused to be made a party to it; but snubbed by them, he was only the more graciously treated by his royal mistress. He follows her like a shadow from palace to palace, in public and private, behind her chair at her meals, in the rumble of her carriage in her drives, bending over to exchange a few words, and calmly possessing himself of her field glass to inspect some distant maneuver at a review.

Our Alleged Navy.

Philadelphia Inquirer.

Speaking of our navy, it has been aptly said that all there is needed to make it effective are ships—it has plenty of water. But having both ships and water it would still be ineffective, for it is absolutely without American seamen. It could no more cope with the navy of England than the cheese could cope with the knife.

A Pronounced Opinion.

Medical News.

The danger of tooth drawing under choloform anesthesia being so pronounced and so readily explained, we hold that no physician is justified in running such risks.

—The extreme cold of last winter, and the unusual floats of Greenland ice that have blocked the harbors and prevented navigation, have brought about a terrible condition of affairs in Iceland. They are on the verge of a great famine, and the Governor of Iceland appeals for help to other nations.—Christian Union.

—Home made jelly glasses: Select good-sized bottles. Take a strip of old muslin or a piece of candle wick, dip it in lamp oil, wrap it around the bottle where you want it to break, set it on fire and the glass will crack just above the cloth.—Leiric Farmer.
